JAMAICA & INFRASTRUCTURE

Jamaica puts power and water limits on AI investment talks

The Government says any proposed AI infrastructure must stay off the public electricity grid and avoid pressure on water supplies. The design remains undisclosed.

Information Minister Dana Morris Dixon has set out Cabinet’s power and water conditions for exploratory AI investment talks. The Gleaner reports that the investor and type of infrastructure remain unidentified.

Those limits are a starting point for scrutiny, not evidence that a workable design exists. Ask who would supply the electricity and water, what happens during an interruption, and who would verify the answers.

The Google Labs experiment is taking waitlist applications. Its proposed repair process keeps a reviewer between an AI-written change and a live site.

A convincing screenshot cannot prove that a repaired form works. Give the reviewer a specific fault, test inputs and a way to reject the proposed change.

TOOLS & RESPONSIBILITY

Check which files an AI assistant can read before you give it work

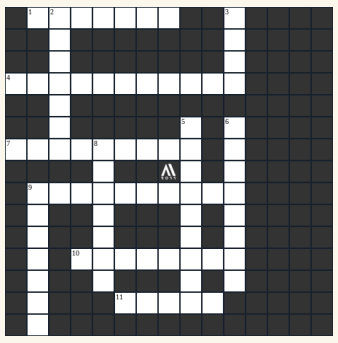

A plain instruction is a request to the assistant. Enforced permissions determine what its commands can reach. Begin with fictional records in a restricted test folder.
